This opinion has been established on the basis of a translation from the original language into the following language

_____, which is the language of a translation furnished for the purposes of international search (under Rule 12.3 and 23.1(b)).

Inventive step (IS)	Claims		YES

2. Citations and explanations:
(1) Regarding Novelty and Inventive Step
Document 1: JP 2002-98636 A (Kubota Corp.), 05 April 2002, paragraphs 0022, 0028-0037, Fig. 6
Document 2: JP 55-126834 A (Tokyo Shibaura Electric Co., Ltd.), 01 October 1980, page 2, lower right column, line 14 to page 4, upper left column, line 10; Fig. 3
Document 4: JP 63-201538 A (Nippon Bunko Kabushiki Kaisha), 19 August 1988, page 4, lower right column, lines 10-18; page 6, upper left column, line 1 to upper right column, line 5; Figs. 1 and 3
Claim 1
The invention of claim 1 possesses novelty with respect to the documents cited in the ISR, but does not involve an inventive step on account of documents 1-3.
Document 1 describes changing and adjusting charge accumulation time in true measurement based on the measurement results of preliminary measurement, and performing dark current compensation in a stage after A/D conversion. But it does not describe:
(A) Performing a preliminary measurement at a specific wavelength without saturated gain, and setting the gain for the true measurement.
(B) Performing zero-point compensation at a stage prior to A/D conversion (not after it).
Nevertheless, items (A) and (B) are disclosed in documents 2 and 3 respectively. Both are merely well-known art in the field of photospectrometry. (Furthermore, regarding (A), the CCD pixels of document 1 corresponding to the wavelength that provides the maximum energy in the measured wavelength region, described in document 2, is equivalent to "photoreceptor unit for sampling" in the present application's invention.)
Employing this sort of well-known art in the invention described in document 1 could easily be carried out by a person skilled in the art.

Continuation of: Box V

Claim 2

The invention of claim 2 possesses novelty with respect to the documents cited in the ISR, but does not involve an inventive step on account of documents 1-3.

Document 2 describes using merely photodiode or photodiode array as a photoreceptor unit for sampling, but the CCD used in document 1 makes a photodiode a unit pixel (paragraph 0022).

Claim 3

The invention of claim 3 possesses novelty with respect to the documents cited in the ISR, but does not involve an inventive step on account of documents 1-4.

Document 2 does not describe the details of the gain switching circuit, but document 4 discloses one that is the exponential type as a variable amplifier requiring this sort of gain control.

Claim 4

The invention of claim 4 possesses novelty with respect to the documents cited in the ISR, but does not involve an inventive step on account of documents 1-3 and 5.

Document 1 does not describe gain correction at the pixel unit, but document 5 pertains to photospectrometry using a CCD image sensor and describes changing the amplitude degree of pixel output in order to smooth pixel output.

(2) Industrial Applicability

The inventions of claims 1-4 have industrial applicability in photospectrometry.

Box No. VIII Certain observations on the international application

The following observations on the clarity of the claims, description, and drawings or on the question whether the claims are fully supported by the description, are made:

Claim 1 refers to "diffraction lattice, etc.," thus it is unclear whether or not a
"diffraction lattice" is mandatory in the description of claim 1.
